Robin Heath is an internationally published author who has written nine books on the subject of ancient wisdom and megalithic astronomy, including the best selling Sun, Moon & Earth. He has also run a successful astrological consultancy for over 33 years, and has taught and lectured to students of the Faculty of Astrological Studies, the Centre for Psychological Astrology, the Astrological Lodge and the Astrological Association.

Following some years as an electronics designer, Robin was for ten years a lecturer in mathematics and engineering. In the mid- 90s Robin became editor of the Astrological Association Journal, taking it from a stapled A5 format to the modern larger bound format which it enjoys today.

Robin remains enthusiastic and passionate about the value of astrology, yet is rather less enthusiastic concerning the value of astrologers. In this one-day workout, Robin reveals an alternative and controversial look at what the solar system is up to and why he thinks astrologers need to adapt their presently limited perspectives on the nature and purpose of our relationship with the sky.

The workshop will also discuss forecasting – that messy business of providing predictive astrological information to clients, family, government, the stock market or the media. What in heaven’s name are we actually doing when we undertake a forecast and why the hell are we doing it anyway?

Why not push your boundaries a little and recalibrate your inner-astrologer. Serious Fun for all who love astrology.

The cost of the seminar is just £35 for AA members – or just £30 for members if you book before 31 May 2008! If you’re not an AA member, you can join for the day for an additional £10 (or join for a year for just £36). To book your place, please complete the following booking form and return it to: The Astrological Association, BCM 450, London WC1N 3XX or phone your credit card details through to 020 8625 0098 (if you get the answerphone, leave a message and we’ll phone you back).
